Projects

- Analysing the Characteristics of CNG Tank Using PET-G and ABS
  This project involves a detailed analysis of the characteristics of CNG (Compressed Natural Gas) tanks using PET-G and ABS materials. The study focuses on evaluating their mechanical properties such as tensile strength, impact resistance, and fatigue behavior, along with thermal stability and chemical resistance under high-pressure conditions. The aim is to compare PET-G and ABS in terms of safety, durability, weight reduction, and cost-effectiveness, in order to determine the most suitable material for lightweight and efficient CNG tank design. The outcome of this project highlights the potential of polymer-based alternatives to conventional metal tanks, offering insights into future applications in the automotive and energy sectors.
